

Vanguard's mission is to take a stand for all investors, to treat them fairly, and to give them the best chance of investment success. For over 40 years, our firm has broadened access to world-class investment strategies – both active and index - designed to help investors achieve their long-term goals. Our decision to enter private equity follows that familiar playbook.

Why consider private equity?

Represents a distinct and growing segment of global equity markets that is not captured through public, listed equities.

Supports portfolio risk diversification through reduced equity correlations and expanded equity market coverage.

Unique market dynamics and liquidity premium offers potential to earn excess returns above public equities over the long-term

These benefits have historically eluded investors who lack the high levels of assets, resources, and relationships needed to access top-performing funds. Vanguard's entry into private equity seeks to solve for these challenges and continues our firm's 40-year history of bringing institutional talent, solutions, and affordability to individual investors in pursuit of improved investment outcomes.

What sets Vanguard apart?

Vanguard has used its resources as a leading global asset manager, expertise in manager selection, and relationships with world-class investment talent to deliver a broadly diversified private equity program that's designed to help improve long-term investor outcomes.

We apply a long-term perspective, greater conviction, and a constant focus on low costs to the investment themes that are most important to you. Our interests are aligned with our clients, a valuable attribute in any space, especially the complex and often opaque world of private markets.

Skill

Vanguard drew on its 40+ years of experience conducting manager diligence and sourcing investment talent to identify and partner with one of the world's most experienced and successful private equity managers, HarbourVest Partners. Vanguard's expertise in identifying high-quality portfolio managers combined with HarbourVest's powerful global platform deliver a diversified, global private equity solution with the Vanguard investor in mind. Consistent with the rest of our investment mandates, Vanguard will continuously evaluate fund and manager performance to ensure our clients achieve the best outcomes.

Vanguard is one of the largest managers of actively managed funds in the world, managing more than $1.7 trillion in active assets.* Our rich history of offering active strategies has resulted in long-term relationships with top-tier external managers and a deep bench of internal talent. Over the past 10 years, 91% of our actively managed funds performed better than their peer-group averages. The Vanguard HarbourVest Private Equity Fund draws on this experience to provide clients access to sought-after investment opportunities, as well as the tools and services they need to succeed and for which Vanguard is known.

Private Equity and risk: a unique asset class

Private investments involve a high degree of risk and, therefore, should be undertaken only by prospective investors capable of evaluating and bearing the risks such an investment represents. Investors in private equity generally must meet certain minimum financial qualifications that may make it unsuitable for specific market participants.

With private equity investments, there are five primary risk considerations: market, asset liquidity, funding liquidity, valuation, and selection. Certain risks are believed to be compensated risks in the form of higher long-term expected returns, with the possible exceptions being valuation risk and selection risk. For selection risk, excess returns would be the potential compensation, however, limited partners ("LPs") must perform robust diligence to identify and gain access to managers with the skill to outperform. PE investments are speculative in nature and may lose value.

Market risk: Private equity, as a form of equity capital, shares similar economic exposures as public equities. As such, investments in each can be expected to earn the equity risk premium, or compensation for assuming the nondiversifiable portion of equity risk. However, unlike public equity, private equity's sensitivity to public markets is likely greatest during the late stages of the fund's life because the level of equity markets around the time of portfolio company exits can negatively affect PE realizations. Though PE managers have the flexibility to potentially time portfolio company exits to complete transactions in more favorable market environments, there's still the risk of capital loss from adverse financial conditions.

Asset liquidity risk: Various attributes can influence a security's liquidity; specifically, the ability to buy and sell a security in a timely manner and at a fair price. Transaction costs, complexity, and the number of willing buyers and sellers are only a few examples of the factors that can affect liquidity. In the case of private equity, while secondary markets for PE fund interests exist and have matured, liquidity remains extremely limited and highly correlated with business conditions. LPs hoping to dispose of their fund interests early - especially during periods of market stress - are likely to do so at a discount.

Funding liquidity risk: The uncertainty of PE fund cash flows and the contractual obligation LPs have to meet their respective capital commitments—regardless of the market environment—make funding risk (also known as commitment risk) a key risk LPs must manage appropriately. LPs must be diligent about maintaining ample liquidity in other areas of the portfolio, or external sources, to meet capital calls upon request from the General Partners ("GPs").

Valuation risk: Relative to public equity, where company share prices are published throughout the day and are determined by market transactions, private equity NAVs are reported quarterly, or less frequently, and reflect GP and/or third-party valuation provider estimates of portfolio fair value. Though the private equity industry has improved its practices for estimating the current value of portfolio holdings, reported NAVs likely differ from what would be the current "market price," if holdings were transacted.

Selection risk: Whether making direct investments in private companies, PE funds, or outsourcing PE fund selection and portfolio construction to a third party, investors assume selection risk. This is because private equity doesn't have an investable index, or rather a passive implementation option for investors to select as a means to gain broad private equity exposure. While there are measures an investor can take to limit risk, such as broad diversification and robust manager diligence, this idiosyncratic risk can't be removed entirely or separated from other systematic drivers of return. Thus, in the absence of a passive alternative and significant performance dispersion, consistent access to top managers is essential for PE program success.
